The child or young person's family and important friends

Who else is living in the child or young person's house at the moment?

Can you sketch the child's family tree (with names added) here? Include anyone you want to, even if they don't live with the child. You may want to put a *by those who are really important to them.

Who else is really important to them? What is their relationship to the child/young person?

All about me (in the child/young person's own words)

How would I describe myself? What am I like? What am I best at? What do I enjoy doing?

What is important to me?

How best to support me with the things I find difficult:

Describe the child/young person’s day

What does this child/young person’s day look like in this household? Consider both school days and non-school days. Where possible, use the actual words and phrases of the child/young person.

The child/young person’s views of what is happening in their life

Where possible, use the actual words and phrases of the child/young person.

The parent/carer’s views of what is happening in their child’s life

The Early Help CAF Assessment Wheel:

This optional tool is useful for showing the strongest worries, concerns and challenges the child/young person is facing. It can be completed with the child prior to meeting with their parent or carer to aid discussion. The parent or carer may find it useful to draw one too and compare with their child's. The person completing the wheel marks on each 'spoke' how concerned or worried they are about that particular issue (1 is not worried and 5 is very worried). After support has been put in place for the family the wheel can be used again to show what progress has been made.

If completing this electronically drag and drop these dots and place them where the child or parent advises:

Guidance for completing an Early Help CAF Form

For advice, guidance and to check if the child already has an open CAF, contact the CAF Team on 01225 713884 or caf@wiltshire.gov.uk. Completed CAFs must not be sent to this email address.

Top tips:

 1 A mother automatically has parental responsibility for her child from birth. A father usually has parental responsibility if he's (a) married to the child's mother; (b) listed on the birth certificate. More than 2 people can have parental responsibility for the same child. For further information visit: <https://www.gov.uk/parental-rights-responsibilities/what-is-parental-responsibility>.

 2 Here you can put the name or type of assessment carried out and who by (e.g. ASD assessment by Paediatrician). There is no need to add detail here as, with consent, you can attach a copy of the assessment and/or its conclusions to the end of the CAF.

Early Help Common Assessment Framework for Children & Young People

3 A drawing by hand is fine here but if you want to, you can create an electronic version (perhaps in PowerPoint) then copy and paste it into the table.

4 These following 3 sections are a chance for the child and young person to be heard. Capture as much as you can in the child or young person's own words.

5 This tool has been provided in case you, the child/young person or parent/carer wish to use it. It is a very useful tool for capturing how the child/family perceive their worries and can help to prompt discussion (especially if both the child and parent complete one and they are compared). Perhaps you can help the child to complete one before meeting with the family? And complete one after the CAF Review of actions to gauge progress? Explanations for each factor can be found in the prompts in the assessment sections on pages 6 to 9. The person completing the assessment wheel marks on the scale for each factor how concerned or worried they are with that particular area (1 is not worried and 5 is very worried).

Here is an example of one completed by a parent who feels their main worries for their child are around their health and wellbeing:

(Note that although it is possible to count up each factor on the wheel to find a total numerical value this is not done or used to inform any decision on the provision of support/services.)

6 It's important this assessment section is completed as thoroughly as possible. To help with this use the relevant prompts on the right of each table to talk through with the child and/or parent/carer.

7 Good analysis helps to draw out what needs to change for the child or young person. Reflect on what has been discussed so far and draw conclusions with the help of the child and/or parent/carer. Sometimes this helps us to realise more information is needed so a space has been provided in this section to make a note of what else you need to know or find out.

8 From your assessment and analysis the desired outcomes for the child or young person should start to take shape. The desired outcomes listed here will form the action items of the TAC Delivery Plan at the end of the document – if you are completing this form electronically then obviously you can simply copy and paste them into the Plan. Note that the first two outcomes have already been completed for you.

9 Consent from at least one parent or carer must be gained before the CAF can be completed and appropriately shared. The young person (aged 16 or younger) may be deemed competent to make the decision regarding consent – in which case parental or carer consent will not be required. Fraser Gillick guidance can help assess whether a child has the maturity to make their own decisions and to understand the implications of those decisions – visit www.nspcc.org.uk/Inform/research/questions/gillick_wda61289.html for more details.

10 The child or parent/carer has the right to state who they do not wish their Early Help CAF assessment shared with – and has the right to expect those wishes to be adhered to. If necessary, explain that this may have an impact on the support and services they receive but do not coerce them into changing their decision. Note, however, that you must inform them that if you believe the child or young person is at risk of serious harm, injury or neglect you have a duty to report that even if consent has been withheld.

11 The Early Help CAF form is the child's and/or parent/carers document and belongs to them. Make a copy for yourself and always ensure the family leave with at least one copy (one being the original). Review the CAF Checklist on page 14, ensure all actions have been carried out and then register the Early Help CAF on the CAF Register by sending a copy with signed consent to DCE Coordination Team, County Hall, Bythesea Road, Trowbridge, Wiltshire, BA14 8JN.
